New York Pioneer in These Laws.

New York was the pioneer in laws for the taxation of inheritances, and other states have largely based their laws upon ours. New York should lead again and do away with this injustice of double taxation, which has now grown to such great proportions, and we may confidently expect that other states who now offend in this respect will again follow our example, but this time in the right direction.

The enactment of a law with reasonable graded rates. Heeral exemptions to small bequests, just to our own citizens and fair in its relations to those of other states, will restore confidence in the business and financial world, retain our citizens, whom by our present law we are threatening to drive into exile, provide a fair and increased revenue for the state and emphasize the pre-eminence of New York in just and reasonable tax legislation.
